Hanes Theatre Fall Play Features Veteran Cast and Slapstick Humor

Chapel Hill High School students will perform George Washington's Bite three times on November 22, 23, and 24 in the school's stage. The play, originally performed in 1943 and later adapted into a movie, is a comedy portraying the financial problems of the young George Washington and his desire to buy a farm. The play involves a financial crisis and a series of mistaken identities, with much of the humor coming from the young Washington's attempts to impress his potential suitor. The play explores themes of love, money, and the challenges of young love in the colonial era.

Nashler art exhibit explores later Miró

An exhibit featuring artwork created by Spanish artist Joan Miró will be on display at the Nasher Museum of Art as part of the 2013-14 exhibition season. Miró was a prominent artist of the early 20th century, known for his abstract paintings and graphic works that often featured surrealistic images of animals, birds, and other organic forms. The exhibit, titled Nasher in Focus: Joan Miró, will showcase a selection of Miró's works from the Nasher's permanent collection, including paintings, drawings, and sculptures. The exhibition aims to highlight Miró's unique artistic style and his influence on modern art.

Cradle hosts rap artists

The Cradle, a non-profit organization that provides support and services to pregnant women and new mothers, will host a rap competition on May 17th. The event will feature local artists who will perform their music, and attendees will have the opportunity to vote for their favorite performers. This event is part of the Cradle's efforts to provide a safe and supportive environment for expecting mothers and their families.
